Whatever location you are using, no matter how public it seems, it is likely you'll need to notify or get permission from somebody.

The impact of failing to inform relevant authorities could result in unnecessary police resources being deployed. It can disrupt your filming and the local community.

Public locations

London is divided into 33 separate boroughs and each has its own Borough Film Service (BFS) to deal with filming requests for all local authority managed locations. These include:

- Streets
- Estates
- Commons
- Town halls,
- Schools
- Shopping centres
- Leisure centres

When public is private

Some areas that seem like public streets are actually privately owned or managed. London's 'public' areas are managed by a number of agencies including:
