

Index to Covington Cemetery Sales Receipt Book

1913-1926

In the early years of the twentieth century, the Covington Town Clerk accepted payment for plots in Covington Cemetery and faithfully entered information about the transactions in a cardboard-bound receipt book. Customers were given a 3" X 5" receipt, while a carbon copy remained in the Clerk's book. Unclaimed original receipts remain in some cases, and show modern users the clerks often used broad-tipped pencils to record these sales.

This book covers the time period 1913-1926, and includes sales recorded by three different town clerks; L.P. Delacroix, Louis A. Perreand, and Carrie K. Warren. Each Clerk had their own method of entering data, including abbreviations that appear unfamiliar to modern researchers.

The book seems to have been retained among the personal papers of Louis Perreand, and placed in the Clerk of Court's documents collection by his daughter Bertha P. Neff. The receipt book features several items consistent with municipal activities in Covington during the World War I era.

In addition to his duties as town clerk, Louis Perreand sold insurance in downtown Covington. One loose page of information in the book is written on yellow Aetna Life Insurance company notepaper. Another loose page is written on the back of a tiny ballot for the September 26, 1916 election for Covington City alderman. Other information is written on the backs of used envelopes.

Name entries in this index describe the person paying for the plot, not necessarily the name of the individual interred in that plot. In some cases, the Clerk noted these differences on the receipt.

Entries prior to 1920 assign plots to citizens grouped by race, while later entries do not make this distinction. Other clerk's notes concerning lot location, size, and purchaser appear on the receipts. Content and significance of these notes may be unclear, however, I reproduced each notation in the hopes they may be helpful in understanding the workings of the Covington Cemetery sales system.
