

Employment Credit Report

Deciding on potential candidates and re-evaluating current employees are some of the most important decisions you make as a human resource professional. You want to make sure you have the relevant information for each candidate and employee. The Employment Credit Report is specifically designed to give you the pertinent information you need to make decisions quickly and easily.

The Employment Credit Report gives you a completely unbiased account of a potential candidate's background information. It helps you assess the candidate's financial responsibility by showing a comprehensive credit history. Employment Credit Report traces credit history and provides public record information, plus other items individuals usually don't include in their job applications.

By revealing potential patterns of inability to meet obligations, this report can also help you in identifying those applicants who may be financially overextended.

Employment Credit Report is delivered in a format that's more descriptive than a standard credit report. This helps you interpret the data and make quick, consistent decisions, without the extra details of a full credit report.
