Construction Management Software

Web-based Application and Electronic Field Data Application

Agency Overview:

The McHenry County Division of Transportation (MCDOT) operates nearly 525 lane miles or 216 center lane miles of paved highways serving the residents of McHenry County. In addition to lane miles, McHenry County DOT's roadway inventory consists of the following:

1. 204 federal, state and locally owned bridges
2. Nearly 400 traffic signals
3. 20 highway lighting systems
4. Approximately 40 miles of storm sewers
5. Nearly 15 miles of guard rails

Scope:

McHenry County's Division of Transportation (MCDOT) is seeking pricing and proposals for an integrated web-based Construction Management Software (CMS) that can be administered by MCDOT construction staff. The program should incorporate the documentation requirements of the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT), and other State and Federal regulatory agencies.

The intended software product would be an integrated solution for field staff to track enter daily diary, project quantities, and issue payments to the contractor, where vendor will provide a web-based user interface for desktop computing in the office and allow remote data entry in the field on project sites.

SUMMARY: Software will track and maintain construction data including Daily Diary, Project Ledger, Change Orders, Subcontractors, and Contractor Pay Estimates. Software shall provide an automated method of tracking the various events that occur during a construction project, resulting in more efficient, accurate, and timely contractor payments and project status reports.

To accommodate the DOT's current and future needs, the preferred software application(s) shall include the following features and/or provisions, with below specifications intended as minimum requirements:

A. Data Collection and Report Generation

Using a construction management software (CMS) web-based module, the authorized agency users can record daily work activities including the quantities of work performed and other critical activities related to construction projects. Daily Diary shall include Weather, Working/Workable Day, Contractor & Activities, Equipment, Labor, etc.

Data entries for the diary may be made via the web-based application or through an optional field data collection application. The software shall include the ability to attach scanned correspondence to the data record and generate cover letters if desired.

From these diary entries, Weekly Reports are generated and shall include the overall percentage of project complete, contract number, main contractor, controlling item, funding, etc.

Custom Report Modifications

The software shall have the ability to allow end users to create custom report applications as needed, to address various aspects of the contract administration process.

B. Financial Management and Contract Payment Processing

CMS web-based software shall provide Financial Management and Contract Payment Processing. Authorized users will have access to preliminary or planned funding information for the contract. CMS software will log all information being uploaded and downloaded from multiple users working on the same project and software will ensure that a single consistent view of the project is maintained using data received from many different sources.

Funding Modifications

Financial allocations can be managed for a contract by setting up new funding sources for the projects, either by adding or modifying funding sources at a category level, or even setting specific funding sources on an item-by-item basis such as agreements with local municipalities for cost-shared or reimbursed items.

Funding options will be customized and can be split by assigning funding source by percentage, including minimum and maximum amounts, and agency can prioritize to begin using funds when a pre-determined amount or percentage has been reached.

Payment Invoices

Finally, work entries can be compiled into Pay Estimates, including the ability for authorized users to include or exclude payment of items. Calculations and entries are updated instantaneously so that item-dependent amounts such as mobilization cost is not reflected in the totals.

Additionally, any pay items not included in the current pay estimate will automatically show on subsequent future pay estimates until they are approved and included on a pay estimate.

CMS shall provide a wide variety of financial reports to analyze the project status including monthly progress and pay estimate reports as well as the total value for contractor pay items completed.

Custom Report Modifications

Software shall provide an option for creating additional customized financial reports if needed.

C. Change Orders & Authorizations

Reduce communication complexity of change orders and contract authorizations between the agency and the main contractor.

Change order approval status shall be available through the contractor's optional web-based application.

Using a corresponding software module, contractors can create and manage subcontracts (including subcontract payments) and interact with agency personnel on subcontract approvals, closeouts, change order approvals, etc.

Contractors also can use their corresponding software to record payments to their subcontractors.

D. Electronic Field Book

An electronic field book shall be an optional mobile application which can support the use of mobile devices to view items and project data from the home office. Electronic field book will allow staff to enter CMS software program and collect field data even when working on remote sites where direct network connections are not possible. Field staff can document daily work activities at the project site, including pay items and quantities of work performed, labor and equipment used by the contractor and subcontractors, daily time charges, daily weather conditions and temperatures at the project site, diary information including project inspections, and instructions to the contractor.

The electronic field book simplifies and streamlines the work of office and field personnel by downloading project pay items and project information from the central CMS to the portable device and electronically uploading the daily work information through the device's synchronization functionality.

E. Training and Technical Support

Quotation shall include costs for online training for significant CMS software updates and vendor shall provide technical support via email or a customer service phone number.

Implementation and Training

The software vendor shall provide adequate technical support during implementation. If the County selects to purchase training, vendor shall provide 1 day of video conference training to DOT staff.

The construction management software vendor must also address the following:

Information Security

The software shall include application level security features to manage users according to their need for software access.

Software Installation

The vendor shall assist with the installation of the software. County IT personnel is anticipated to be present during this process.
